

SUMMARY

This episode deals with the various aspects of architecture like form, function, structure, skin, material etc. which are the analogues to the aspects of an organism in nature. Each aspect is explained in detail about their significance in Architecture and also a comparative significance in nature is explained. The above discussions are reinforced with examples from architectural history for better understanding.