

Summary

This lecture discussed about the definition of concrete, reinforced cement concrete, reasons for using steel as a material in RCC elements and explained about characteristic strength of materials and characteristic load. And also discussed about the working stress design method and ultimate load design method in detail and differences between these two methods. This lecture also discussed about the factor of safety used and drawbacks of working stress method in detail.