

Glossary

Natural Ventilation is the use of wind and temperature differences to create airflows in and through buildings.

Wind ventilation supplies air from a positive pressure through openings on the windward side of a building and exhausts air to a negative pressure on the leeward side.

Stack ventilation uses temperature differences to move air.