

Summary

This lecture is about the design criteria when designing air conditioning systems for large buildings and their energy conservation measures. The typical choices for cooling systems for small and large buildings has been addressed.