

SUMMARY

In this session we learn about the British Pavilion Expo, Seville, Spain was a one-of-a-kind structure in Spain designed for an expo for the British by Nicholas Grimshaw. In this project, Grimshaw very subtly added all British characters into the expo thereby making a symbolism and subtly introducing green building concepts into the structure still maintaining a unique structure. While the Waterloo train terminal was a prestigious and historic project in which Grimshaw worked his sweat to create a genius product. You would also understand the contemporary building structural expressions in the typology of terminal buildings and expo buildings.
