

Summary

The structure and architecture series next presents tent structures, the simplest of manmade structures that can stand stable and can be assembled, dismantled in a jiffy. It is imperative that we understand the basics of tent for tent is the basic of all tensile and tensegrity structures.

Building bridges is the quintessential achievement of human being. Ability to build bridges, metaphorically and literally. We shall see the different types of bridges, structurally and through appearance, from history to modern bridges and even future bridges.