

Summary

Modular construction is something that made man start thinking about mass manufacture, quality, production sequencing, faster assembly lines and everything thereon. When one part of a structure can be repeated multiple times to get a bigger structure, that is the ultimate achievement of the production line helping in construction.

We would also learn about advantages and disadvantages of modular construction, different types of modules and modular architecture, understanding of general design considerations while using modules, etc.