

Summary

Human achievement did not stop at building bridges, we went to build bridges that span very long spans. Any span that's longer than 20M is a long span and we have been developing long span bridges and structures for a long time now and we have had significant breakthroughs in that field. We shall see why we require them, how they work, different types and what are the advantages and disadvantages of each of the type.