

Summary

The lecture gives a basic understanding of the behavior of various building types when the earthquake happens. The plan of a building and its relevance to earth quake resistance is discussed and understood. The lecture discusses how various building shape responds to earthquakes and the amount of resistance a building can have based on its plan shape. How a free-standing masonry wall respond to earthquake is understood. The performance of wall enclosure without roof for earthquake resistance is discussed.