

Summary

In this chapter we can summarize that standard and modern facilities play a very significant role in human performance. In other word, other factors being equal, a person who gets opportunity to play and practice on ultra-modern facilities is bound to perform better than the persons who had only traditional or outdated facilities. In the under developed and the developing countries, with enormous population dominated by school aged and school going children and having limited resources for equipment and facilities, improvisation is a compulsion.