Summary

It is quite clear that the two forms of foreign investment are completely different. Both have its positive and negative aspects. However, foreign investment in the form of FDI is considered better than FPI because it does not just bring capital but also amounts to better management, governance, and transfer of technology and creates employment opportunities. Today we learnt about the difference between FDI and FPI, FII's strategies, its impact on volatility and stock market and lastly some suggestions to government on their increasing concern about FIIs.
