

Summary

Sausages are one of the oldest forms of processed foods, their origin being lost in antiquity. Sausages are comminuted processed meat products made from red meat, poultry or a combination of these with water, binders and seasoning. The FAO (1985) views sausages as one of the oldest forms of meat processing in which meat go through various processes to acquire desirable organoleptic and keeping properties

