

Summary

Product or sample protection is important in a wide variety of modern industries. This includes the food, biotechnology, pharmaceuticals industries, in which clean air is necessary for the sterile production of products. A laminar flow cabinet provides a controlled environment in which levels of particulates, microbes, and contamination of all kinds are regulated and kept to a minimum by constant air filtration with industrial-grade filters.