

OBJECTIVE

The evaluation of odours is of great importance for the acceptance or liking of the product. The status of quality can also be judged by evaluation. Therefore the measurement of perception is of great concern. The type of odour and its quantification play an important role in food industries. Therefore, the objective is to have the knowledge of the available methods for measurement of odours. Generally the odour measurement can be carried out by sensory methods as well as instrumental methods.